ABSTRACT

A system for processing data retrieved from an information service layer is provided. The system includes a requestor component to provide a request for data to the information service layer. A receiver component is operable to communicate with a client service of the information service layer to receive a response string from the information service layer. The response string includes data based on the request. An analysis component analyzes at least a portion of the response string. A writer component is operable to format the at least portion of the response string based upon a desired format. A method for processing data retrieved from the information service layer is also provided.